

Chad M. Domangue, MD

Dr. Chad Domangue, originally from south Louisiana, is an Interventional Pain Management Specialist with extensive training in treating back and neuropathic pain. After completing his neurology training at the Medical University of South Carolina (MUSC) in Charleston and the University of Virginia (UVA) in Charlottesville, Dr. Domangue was selected to instruct neurology at the University of Kentucky (UK) in Lexington. There, he accepted a pain management fellowship position, where he trained under one of the world's most prominent specialists in pain management, Dr. William Witt.

Dr. Domangue has experience in various modalities used in the management of pain, but his advanced training is in interventional procedures, including spinal cord stimulation and pain pumps. A unique part of his training included a mini-fellowship in Headache and Movement Disorders which integrated deep brain stimulation (DBS) placement.

Dr. Domangue is board certified in Neurology and board eligible for certification in Pain Management, and Clinical Neurophysiology which allows him to evaluate and render his opinion as a neurologist and pain specialist. Now he is pleased to bring home this level of training utilizing the latest, most effective technology to alleviate pain in a private practice setting.
